Chapter 1 by Natalie Drury

It starts the same time every year, people are made to gather in the middle of the village centre, to check out the new game show of the year.

Last year two people from our village where selected to take part and the same will happen again this year.

Each year it's a different game show with a different theme, the elders in the village said no game show has every been repeated and they always end badly.

The elders said as long as they can remember no one every in our village has ever one. The prize is life changing for our village, if we win the following year our village doesn't have to compete in the game show ( unless your stupid enough to volunteer to have a go).

My name is Emily Holmes and this year is my first year I can be selcted to take part in the game show.

I make my way to the village centre, register myself with the people waiting at the desks and then I make my way to the holding area.

I wait nervously for the host to announce this years theme on the big screen that has been put up in the village. I also wait for the names of this years competitors to be drawn.

The host takes the stage and says.....
